News from Mexico is quite important. Madame Juarez arrived at Vera Cruz on the 14th, and was received enthusiastically. President Juarez arrived at the Capital on the 14th. He is said to decline a re-election. Twelve more Imperialist Generals have been shot. The remains of Maximilian have been sent to Vera Cruz where it will be put on board an Austrian frigate. The Mexican Congress have been summoned to cleet a President. Santa Anna is still alive at Campeachy, but his captors awaiting instructions in regard to him from the Liberal Government. The feeling there is that he will undoubtedly be shot. Advison from Matamoras are to the same effect. Twelve more generals who served under Maximilian had been shot at Querntare Among perial colonels had also been shot. 700

Mr. Merrill fully and frankly acknowledges that all of the culpubility attached to these events belongs to him. In the most soleran and impressive manner he exhonorates the young lady at North Adams whose name has been so closely connected with his, from all blame, and asserts that his meeting her at Troy was unforeseen and that he accompanied her to Albany, but that when the story of their elopement games't publicity, they were more than two bundred miles apart. Mr. Morrill says that he has been op-

Johnson) spoke correctly, when, in his North Carolina proclamation of May, 1866, he declared that all the civil governments of the South had been destroyed by the rebellion. He then, without calling Congress together, went on with the work of reconstruction, in the absence of all law upon the subject, Has Congress made State governments subordinate to the military power? So did the President. Has Cangress provided for the calling of State convetions? So did the President, Has Congress authorized their ratification? So did the President. But he ordered conventions by his executive fiat, and recognized their constitutions without their being submitted to the people.

Congress required the people—the registered voters - to call the convention themselves, and then to approve or reject their work by a popular vote. Has Congress required the ratification of a constitutional amendment? So did the President. Our crime is, I suppose, that we provided that those whom the nation had made free should have the freeman's ballot for their protection, while the President did not. But the results of his policy strikingly contrast with the result of ours. The nation looked on to see what fruits would result from his action, and what were they? In nearly every State the rebel power resumed its authority, and became dominant in their executive, legislative and judicial departments. The vagrant and labor laws, virtually re-enslaving the emancipated, followed, and murders, outrages, riots and massacres ripened the whole. Loyal men were our duty to our country, and on our oaths, we could not aftern and legalize this policy; hence the legislative action we have since taken. Approved in the even a more triumphant endorsement hereafter. The President appeals to the ballot box, and so do we, and by its decision we are willing to stand or fall."
